JESSICA A. A. HIGHSMITH

formerly penned (Alex.J) is a passionate individual on fire and dedicated to living a purpose-driven life. Through childhood trauma and overcoming the odds stacked mountainously against her, these humbling beginnings set the stage for the drive and hunger that pushed and incubated her toward just a portion of her purpose. Through her Parent Company, Empower Me Enterprises, Inc., and its subsidiaries such as: Empower Me Books/ (EMB International), Empower Me Coaching, Empower Me STEM, Empower Me Events & Retreats and her Non-profit organization, Empower Me, Inc., Jessica seeks to provide empowerment programs, workshops and conferences that will develop the sociological, mental and holistic well-being of individuals from all over the world.

Jessica is the wife of a supportive husband and they are the proud parents of three sons. Jessica's formal education includes an MBA specialized in Project Management, and a BS in Chemistry. Additionally, Jessica has diversified experience within the Mental Health, Life Sciences, Pharma/Biotech, Book Publishing, Church Administration and Business arenas. Jessica is trained in the focuses of Change Management, Operations Management, Business Development and is a Certified Lean Six Sigma Black Belt. Began to Pursue her Ph.D. and has since put it on pause to focus on family.

Jessica is also the author of the MISFITS SERIES, beginning with Volume One: Finding My Voice, which describes her personal experience growing up in an abusive, dysfunctional, and emotionally vacant home.

EMPOWER ME STEM - ABSTRACT & BIO

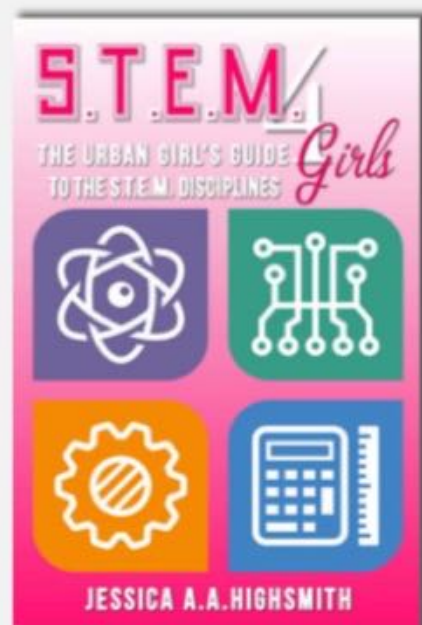

S.T.E.M. 4 Girls: The Urban Girl's Guide to the S.T.E.M. Disciplines Jessica A. A. Highsmith

"Don't feel like you cannot reach for the stars... Honey, you can walk on the moon if you feel like doing the work!" ~Jessica A. A. Highsmith

It is a well-known fact that there is a shortage of women who work in the fields of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math. A growing problem which has become an even greater reality for those girls who come from urban communities, and dysfunctional or impoverished environments.

Part of the reason women are not choosing these fields as a career, as well as part of the solution, can be resolved while they are still young. In S.T.E.M. 4 Girls; The Urban Girl's Guide to the S.T.E.M. Disciplines, Highsmith provides us with a hands-on approach to dealing with the underlying and environmental issues these particular girls deal with on a daily basis; with the goal being to develop the entire individual facing these issues.

In S.T.E.M. 4 Girls, a bridge is built from trauma to success; empowering young ladies to "Love U 1st".

About the Author

JESSICA AA HIGHSMITH is a passionate individual, on fire, and dedicated to living a purpose-driven life. Through her company Empower Me Enterprises, Inc. (Empower Me Books & Empower Me STEM). Her non-profit organization, Empower Me, Inc., Jessica seeks to provide empowerment programs, workshops, and conferences that will develop the sociological, mental, and holistic wellbeing of individuals. As an Early Career Development Coach for youth and Young Adults, who works in conjunction with the efforts of either parents or Mentors, Jessica is a strong advocate for at-risk youth and those pursuing STEM disciplines. Additionally, she has a foundation in Chemistry, Pre-medical, pre-pharmacy, and math; Jessica bridged the gap in her various career experiences by getting her MBA, specialized in Project Manager. She now works as a part of a Vaccine Institute as a Project Manager for Good Manufacturing Practices for Drug Development. She has worked in the Pharmaceutical - Biotech - Manufacturing Industries and Academia Settings since 2007. (Over 14 years of experience!)
